NURSE IS BRUTALLY MURDERED BY SCION OF WEALTHY FAMILY

Youth Kills Young Woman
By Stabbing While
On Walk

MORRISTOWN, N. J., July 15.—Harry Woolsey, Jr., an overgrown boy of 14, today told how he brought Anna Miller, 23, of Scranton, Pa., his nurse, to the top of a mountain overlooking Green Pond, and as she was admiring the beauty of the scene he plunged a hunting knife six times into her back and killed her—so police say.

The girl, screaming from her wounds, staggered a few steps and moaned.

"Do you know what you are doing to me?"

"Of course I do," Woolsey replied and stabbed her again, according to police.

Police Sergeant William Simpson, who said the boy had signed a confession, today declared young Woolsey was unable to give any motive for the fiendish act.

Miss Miller's body was found in a ravine.

The nurse and the boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Woolsey, wealthy residents of Ridgewood, left Sunday evening for a walk. The boy was the nurse's charge. They were last seen Sunday evening walking toward the mountain.

The boy, who is large for his age, weighing about 160 pounds, walked in Dover police headquarters last night and asked for a night's lodging. He was recognized and immediately questioned.

Authorities said the boy was mentally deficient.

SUES HAROLD LLOYD

Charging Harold Lloyd, screen comedian, with "borrowing" one of her late husband's stories for making a movie, Mrs. Sadie Wither, widow of the well known short story writer, H. C. Wither, has brought a $1,000,000 damage suit against Harold Lloyd at Los Angeles. Counsel for Lloyd contends that Wither himself had approved the script of the motion picture in question after the writer's story had been submitted and rejected.

HEAD OF BETHLEHEM STEEL TAKES STAND IN MERGER CONTEST

Salary Of Officials Will Be Issue In Dispute

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 15.—Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, was scheduled to take the stand as a "adverse witness" in common pleas court here today for cross-examination by attorneys who are seeking to prevent the consummation of a merger of the Bethlehem concern with Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.

Details of an $800,000 loan, made by Bethlehem to Pickands, Mather and Co. without note or collateral for the purpose of buying up Sheet and Tube stock to be voted in favor of the merger, were expected to be sought by the anti-merger attorneys from the Bethlehem president.

The salary of Grace as president of the eastern concern was also expected to become an issue, since the anti-merger forces, led by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, charge that huge salaries paid Bethlehem officials were concealed from Sheet and Tube stockholders at the time of the merger ratification.

Grace declined to reveal his salary in a deposition taken from him in New York several weeks ago. Anti-mergerists claim, however, that Grace has received $1,600,000 annually from Bethlehem.

Elton Hoyt II, Cleveland capitalist, and a partner in Pickands, Mather and Co., testified yesterday in the trial, which is on an injunction suit filed by the Eaton-controlled International Shares Corporation, and Myron C. Wick, Jr., a Sheet and Tube stockholder.

Hoyt testified yesterday that Pickands, Mather and Company entered the proxy war, which preceded the famous stockholders meeting last April when the merger was ratified, because it was "unfairly attacked" by opponents of the Youngstown merger.

He corroborated the previous testimony of Henry Dalton, another Pickands, Mather partner, regarding the $800,000 loan made by Bethlehem. The loan was repaid within a few days, Hoyt said, when Grace decided that "it might be misunderstood."

Hoyt also corroborated Dalton's previous testimony that Pickands, Mather and Co. had spent $9,000,000 for 600,000 shares of Sheet and Tube stock during the "battle of proxies."

Anti-merger attorneys are seeking to prove that Bethlehem money was used through Pickands, Mather and Company, in the purchase of Sheet and Tube stock to put the merger across, thus violating the federal anti-trust laws. Hoyt defended his concern's activities on the ground that Pickands, Mather entered the stock-buying war solely to protect its own interests.

PRAYS FOR DEATH

Allenists are expected to examine 78-year-old Andrew L. Beers of Walton, N. Y., who has prayed for death for himself that he may join the mentally deficient daughter he killed out of love.

The aged father confessed to killing the girl, Frances Beers, 24, an imbecile since birth, with an ice pick, because he feared for her fate after his death.

PROSECUTION WILL GIVE CONFESSIONS TO DEATH PLOT JURY

Final Offensive Of State
Planned In Smith
Case

JEFFERSON, O., July 15.—The final offensive of the state in the court battle for the life of Tilby Smith, 26, Ashtabula contractor who is charged with conspiracy in the murder of his young wife, Mrs. Clara Smith, 22, was begun by Prosecutor Howard M. Nazor in the Ashtabula courthouse here today.

Eighteen witnesses testified for the state yesterday. Prosecutor Nazor planned an attempt today to prove that the woman's death was the result of a murder plot, which he claims was engineered by Smith and carried out by Mrs. Maude Lowther, 22-year-old quarter-blood Indian girl, alleged illicit lover of Smith.

Nazor will attempt to present proof of the plot by submitting to the jury the signed confessions of Smith and Mrs. Lowther, in which it is charged that Mrs. Lowther fired the shot that killed Mrs. Smith as she sat with her husband, and two small sons in Smith's truck. Mrs. Lowther charged in her confession that Smith planned the murder and urged the use of a revolver because "poisoning would be too slow."

Police Lieutenant Albert Snow and Sheriff Frank Sheldon before whom the confessions were made, were among the witnesses to be examined today.

First efforts of the defense to save Smith's life will be made today or tomorrow, when twelve witnesses will be paraded through the witness stand.

SUBMIT REPORT ON PROBE OF DISASTER

BOSTON, July 15.—The report and findings of the United States inspectors of steam vessels on the crash on June 10th between the coastwise liner Fairfax and the oil tanker Plinthis in Massachusetts Bay, which cost forty-nine lives, today was said to be in the hands of Inspector General Dickerson N. Hoover, head of the service at Washington.

Asked to confirm reports that serious charges were made in the report and that blame for the disaster had been fixed, local inspectors referred inquiries to Washington, where the report and findings were to be made public.

Hearings on the responsibility for the sea crash occupied ten days here and at Norfolk, Va., with nearly 100 witnesses heard. Considerable time was spent at the inquiry hearing why radio S. O. S. calls were not successfully sent out.

TO PROBE RACKETEERS

NEW YORK, July 15.—Investigation of "labor racketeering" was promised by the district attorney's office today after it was claimed the dress manufacturing industry, representing an investment of $350,000,000, had been compelled to pay $2,000,000 in the past year. Shake-down practices from racketeers promising protection from various union agreements were carried out with the assistance of gangsters, union officials said.

Dr. Clendening is the author of "The Human Body," one of the governors of the American College of Physicians and professor of medicine in the University of Kansas. He will write exclusively for the Central Press for the next four years and his column will replace that of Dr. Peters in The Gazette. ### BUSINESS RECORDS STRIKE LOWEST EBB NOW CLAIMS AYRES

Conditions To Grow Better
In August Says
Economist

CLEVELAND, July 15.—Industrial and business records will reach a low ebb in July, become better in August, and still better in September, Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, noted banker and economist, predicted here today in his monthly analysis of business and industry.

Ayres based his predictions for business improvements during the forthcoming months upon the facts that automobile companies are planning to increase their output; that the most important steel companies have orders received or in sight sufficiently large enough to increase their production materially; that the volume of new construction is slowly growing and that industry seems to be able to hold its gains.

The economist also pointed out that the present bond market is of the kind that is most effective in aiding business recovery.

It is a market that is demonstrating its ability to absorb increasingly great volumes of new floatations at gradually advancing prices," Ayres said, calling attention to the fact that Markets of similar characteristics ushered in the business recoveries following the depressions of 1908, 1921, and 1924.

Ayres also expressed the belief that from this time forward the sentiment of business should improve.

CONSCIENCE COSTS

COLUMBUS, O., July 15.—A conscience-stricken taxpayer, formerly of Franklin County but now apparently a resident of Redlands, Calif., today had enriched Franklin County's general fund by $250.

Included in the envelope containing the two $100 bills and a $50 bill which were sent to the county treasurer, was an unsigned note saying that the amount "is conscience money from a person that is trying to live honestly in the sight of God."

OHIO IS HEALTHIER STATISTICS SHOW

COLUMBUS, O., July 15.—A notable decrease in deaths in Ohio for the first four months of 1930, as compared to the corresponding length of time in 1929, was reported here today by J. C. Plummer, head of the vital statistics division of the Ohio department of health.

Deaths in 1929 totaled 31,944 as compared with 27,602 for this year.

The disastrous fire at the Ohio State Penitentiary April 21, which claimed 320 lives, accounted for an enormous increase in fire casualties.

Deaths from automobile accidents showed an increase of 72, from 455 to 527.

POSSES RUSH FRANK GOLDSBOROUGH FROM WRECKAGE OF PLANE

Companion Hailed As Hero; Summoned Help
To Scene

DUNVILLE NOTCH, Vt., July 15.—Climaxing a twenty-hour search through lonely Vermont mountains and forests, a searching party early today found Frank Goldsborough, noted boy aviator. He still was pinned down by the tangled wreckage of his plane, which crashed at full speed yesterday morning into the side of Sucker Pond Mountain.

Badly hurt, the young pilot's hand still rested on the ignition wires, which he had reached out to cut as his plane was rended and twisted by the crash. He had prevented the ship from catching fire and probably saved his life.

Heavy groans from the unconscious boy immediately revealed to his rescuers that Goldsborough still lived. He had a heavy gash over one eye. His chest and one leg appeared seriously crushed.

The plane was found on what is known as Marshall's Mill plantation.

Hands that had cut aside tangled undergrowth and clambered up the sides of valleys became tender to remove Goldsborough carefully from the wreckage. It was estimated a stretcher could not be carried down the mountain in less than two hours.

As soon as word of the discovery was sent out, a stretcher was dispatched from here to the swamp in which the plane lay.

The discovery of Goldsborough was made at 6:30, exactly nineteen hours and a half after Donald Mockler, flying companion and manager of the young aviator, stumbled away from the wreckage in search of aid, and lost his bearings.

Mockler is hailed as a hero in Vermont today.

He wandered bewildered, lost, stumbling through swamp and over mountain for six hours after the crash. But he refused to rest when he had summoned aid. He was determined to carry on until succor had reached his injured companion. He walked with the searchers throughout the night, trying to help by recalling landmarks he had passed in his wanderings.

When the end of the trail was reached it was learned Goldsborough had been the trained aviator throughout. In addition to cutting the ignition wires and preventing the plane from going up in flames, the youth had opened his parachute and prepared to jump. He never had a chance to do so.

Word was sent to Memorial Hospital at Bennington that Goldsborough would be brought there. Physicians and nurses were ready to

ITALY RACE ENTRY IS RETURNED

LONDON, July 15.—The Royal Aero Club today returned Italy's entry for next year's Schneider cup race, the only application received so far.

The entry was returned because the newest rule governing acceptance of applicants was not conformed to, it was pointed out. The International Aviation body at a general conference last January altered entry conditions by raising the deposit for every machine entered from $200 to $3,000. Italy challenged the new ruling, and may contest it further in a test case.

Praying Judge

MANY SLAIN IN RIOT IN EGYPT

LONDON, July 15.—Many persons were reported killed and injured when a riot of major proportions between political demonstrators and police broke out in Alexandria, Egypt, today according to Central News and Exchange Telegraph dispatches from Cairo.

An Exchange message said the dead were carried out of the main square where the riot took place, in carts. No check-up of the casualties was given.

The demonstration was led by followers of Nuhass Pasha, former premier.

A number of shops in the affected area were closed. Europeans engaged in business of visiting in the neighborhood of the main square took refuge in the stock exchange.

CROOKED POLITICS PLAYED BY SPEAKER AT LUTHERAN MEET

Communism Is Also Scored; Guests Enjoy
excursion

CLEVELAND, O., July 15.—With the first day's business sessions featured by stirring speeches that rapped the tactics of revamping the constitution of the United States and permitting crooked politicians to control the government, meetings of the thirty-eighth annual convention of the International Lutheran Walther League were resumed here today for election of officers and sectional conferences.

Delegates to the convention were warned yesterday that they have themselves to blame if they "sit on the sidelines and permit communistic organizations, crooked politicians and corrupt officials to control the government."

This warning came from Walter Helmke, of Port Wayne, Ind., secretary of the league's board, who spoke on the subject of "Dual Citizenship."

The young people of today ought to exercise their right of citizenship," Helmke declared. "When you are of age, you ought to consider it a privilege as well as a duty to vote for the officers who will run your government."

Last night delegates and visitors to the convention were guests on a boat excursion. The convention banquet will be held tonight, with Dr. William E. Wickenden, president of Case School of Applied Science, as the principal speaker.

DECLINE IN FARM WAGES REPORTED

WASHINGTON, July 15.—There was a two per cent decline in the index of the general level of farm wages from April 1 to July 1, the department of agriculture announced today.

This decline, in sharp contrast to the usual seasonal farm wage advance of 6 per cent for the period, brought the index to the lowest July level recorded since it was first compiled in 1923.

The supply of farm labor on July 1 was the largest reported by farms in any month covered by available records. Apparently unemployed industrial workers have turned to the country in search of a livelihood.

Bungalow Is Convenient, Moderately Priced

Lumber Dealer Asked About Contractors

Asked why Xenia retail lumber dealers do not publish a list of reliable building contractors in order that the public might feel secure in taking the important step of deciding on the builder to erect a new home, representatives of this local concern stated that this isn't necessary because a contractor must be known to be thoroughly honest and reliable before he is recommended to a prospect by a Xenia lumber merchant, regardless of whether the job in question is small or large.

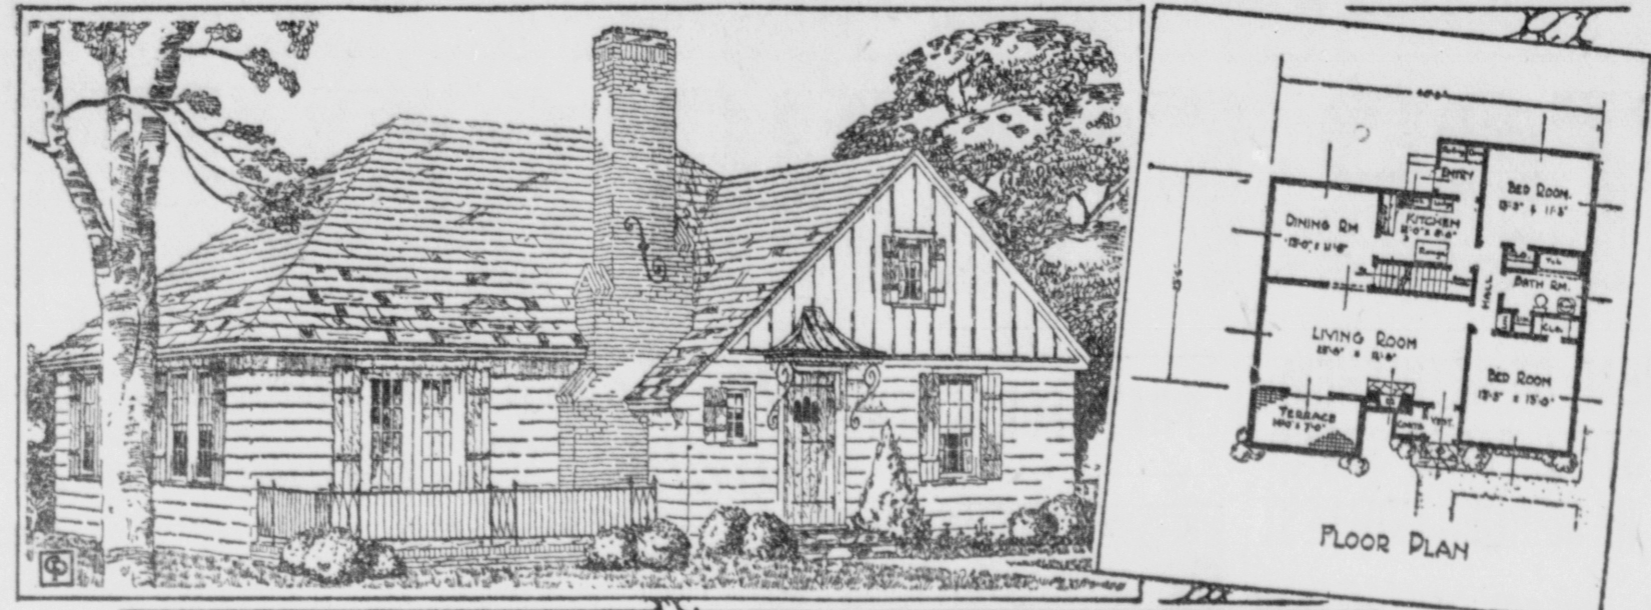

Every retail lumber dealer in the city, it was explained, is intimately acquainted by experience with a group of contractors whose word, he knows, can be depended upon, and whose work is always guaranteed.

"Labor," this dealer stated, "comprises one of the most important parts of any home building undertaking. And with all of the city's most reliable contractors working exclusively on jobs the materials for which are supplied by local concerns, it follows that whenever a small order house may be patronized, the type of workmanship employed cannot be the best obtainable at the same price. Whenever the human element enters into a construction project, there is bound to be wide variations. Perhaps this would not be self-evident a month after jobs under comparison are completed but inferior workmanship is certain to be evident within a year and then it results not only in repair bills and increased depreciation but in far greater opposition to a sale if it becomes necessary to sell."

Families who are thinking of building are urged to get in touch with this lumber dealer, for in comparing the policy of buying a ready cut house from an outside concern with the policy of patronizing the local dealer, he is entitled to present his convincing case. According to local lumber merchants, there is no justification for buying a ready cut house from an outside concern, having it shipped in a unit, having the material subjected to all kinds of weather during the construction process, and when the job is done, having a home whose manufacture immediately brands it as a product of questionable quality difficult to pass on. Families who take the time to investigate thoroughly know they can build a better home for less money by following the advice of local lumber merchants they know.

PLAN OF SMALL BUNGALOW SHOWS CONVENIENCE; PRICE IS REASONABLE

The most desirable feature of this bungalow is the convenience of its plan. Not only are the rooms on one floor, but they are arranged to suit the convenience of the owner. It was designed by Willard B. Smith of Syracuse, N. Y. The living room is 25 feet 6 inches by 12 feet 6 inches, and is lighted by French doors and by windows on the other wall. An archway leads into the dining room

The kitchen sink is under the window, the refrigerator in the entry. Two bedrooms and bath constitute the sleeping quarters, and are entirely separated from living room and kitchen by a hallway. All rooms have cross ventilation. Mr. Smith estimates this house can be built for less than $8,000. The plans may be purchased from the architect. What mightier recommendation can a medicine have than the grateful words of those who, to their everlasting joy, put it to the test. Read the grateful statement of Mr. Henry Faulkner, Company 3, Soldiers Home, Dayton, Ohio, who says: "Konjola certainly proved a blessing in my stubborn case, bringing relief after all else tried for stomach and kidney troubles and nervousness. After every meal came gas and bloating; my back ached and every night I had to get up frequently because of the kidney condition. Konjola was so strongly recommended that I decided to give this new medicine a trial. Today I feel like a new man, able to eat anything I want. My nerves are quiet and I sleep well. I will always be a friend of Konjola."

Though Konjola does go swiftly to the very source of the ills it is designed to combat, a full treatment of from six to eight bottles is strongly recommended. Konjola is a new and different medicine of 32 ingredients, 22 of them the juices of roots and herbs long known for their medicinal value. Konjola works quickly and thoroughly at the very root, the fount of the ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Konjola is not designed to give mere temporary relief, but to bring new, glorious and lasting health.

Konjola is sold in Xenia, Ohio, at the Gallaher Drug Store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

MODERN FURNITURE GIVES FREE REIGN TO COLOR

The modernist style in furniture now so much in vogue calls for a finish in keeping with the advanced style of the design—a smooth, satiny finish paint that will insure durability and ease of cleaning.

Modern furniture also permits the striking colorful effects more than any other period furniture.

A coffee table was brushed with coral rose, and aluminum and gold sprayed on by taking a piece of cardboard and placing it at different angles on the sides and top of the table several hours after the first coat of Duco had dried. This is a modern conception of sunburst.

A "what-not" or "stepped-back" or "skyscraper" bookcase was brushed with a half-and-half mixture of brewster green Duco and lawn green on the exterior. The interior was sprayed with gold and the edges were "tiffanied" in a combination of the gold and green.

By this we mean the edges were brushed with the green Duco and, while it was still wet, brushed with the gold Duco. Then a piece of rough cloth was bunched into a tight wad, which was tapped lightly over the surface while it was tacky. This procedure lifted the gold in places, allowing the green to show through.

A small telephone stand and book shelf were sprayed with rich red on the interior, and brushed with deep blue on the exterior. The edges were "tiffanied" with the deep blue and rich red Duco.

A "circle-end" bookcase was sprayed with aluminum on the inside, and brushed with black on the outside. These are only a few of the striking and effective color schemes possible with the modern art furniture.

SENTENCED TO JAIL
Edward Grindle, 34 Lake St., was sentenced to six months in the county jail by Judge E. D. Smith Tuesday morning when he entered a guilty plea to a statutory charge brought against him by the father of a 13-year-old neighbor girl. The sentence is the only penalty set by law in case of a guilty plea being entered in such case, when the trial judge is given final jurisdiction. Grindle was represented by Attorney F. L. Johnson.

YOUTH SENTENCED
Charles Randall, 19, withdrew a former plea of not guilty to a petit larceny charge, and entered a guilty plea Tuesday morning. He was fined $100 and costs and committed to jail in lieu of payment, by Judge E. D. Smith.

Randall announced that he wished to plead guilty, while on the witness stand in a hearing in the case in which he was accused, of stealing three cartoons of cakes valued at $6.50 from the West Main street Kroger grocery. A 15-year-old Dayton boy, a visitor in the city, who was with Randall when the theft occurred, was turned over to juvenile court. Police say the younger boy has no previous juvenile court record.

The new club camp on the Little Miami River near Clifton was host to 115 club members from twenty-two southwest Ohio counties last week when the Southwest Ohio District was held at that place. County representatives were sent here for a week's training in order that they may be able to conduct camps in their respective counties.

CONSTRUCTION OF MINIATURE GOLF LINKS MAY BE OPPOSED

Possibility of legal action by property owners in the neighborhood to prevent the construction of a miniature golf course on a lot at Detroit St. and Fairground Ave., owned by The Carroll-Binder Co., had taken no definite shape Tuesday afternoon.

The lot was leased to Louis Menowitz, of Cincinnati who began excavations for the hazards Tuesday morning after obtaining a building permit from the city.

Charles Carroll, of the Carroll-Binder Co., said that the two-year lease on the lot granted by his firm to the Cincinnati man, contains a clause providing for cancellation of the contract in case boisterous or unseemly conduct is permitted on the premises.

The lot has a frontage of 125 feet on Detroit St., about eighty feet on Fairground Ave. and is 150 feet deep, extending from Detroit to King streets. Mr. Menowitz who is going ahead with the construction, said that the course is to be patterned after that at the Swiss Gardens, Cincinnati, but will be more attractive.

It will be the second miniature golf course to be built in Xenia and the third in this vicinity. L. E. John is building a miniature course on a lot at the rear of his home on N. Galloway St. and Clement and cities. Scarcity of available vacant lots in Xenia is said to have been the reason the little links have not made their appearance in other places here. The city board of education has had numerous applications for leasing to old Central school grounds on E. Market St. for that purpose. City Manager M. C. Smith, who is said to be a member of the school board, said that seventeen persons have seen him regarding the possibility of obtaining that site. This will not be done, as the board of education is legally barred from renting or leasing the property for any other purpose should it be disposed of to do so.

FARMER CLAIMED BY DEATH SUDDENLY

Fred Cecil Griffith, 53, farmer, residing on the Jamestown and Bowersville Pike two miles east of Bowersville, was found dead in his home early Monday afternoon. Louis Pickering, a neighbor, found Griffith, when he stopped at the Griffith home. Heart trouble was the cause of death, according to County Coroner R. L. Haines, who said death had taken place some time Sunday night.

Mr. Griffith was a widower and lived alone on the John T. Harbison farm. He formerly resided in Dayton.

He is survived by three daughters and one son, all of Dayton, and two brothers, of Washington, C. H. The body was removed to the funeral home of Stewart and Burr at Jamestown and was taken Tuesday afternoon to the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Becker, Viewell Ave., Dayton. Funeral services will be held at the daughter's home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OUR BUSINESS—And he gave some apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Sun of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.—Eph. 4:11.

POST-WAR STOP

The American battleships Arkansas, Florida and Utah, under the flag of Rear Admiral Cluverius, put into Kiel the other day for an informal ninety-six-hour visit. This statement may not sound particularly exciting, but the event itself was of considerable significance, because it was the first post-war stop of an American fleet at a German port, and it was featured by the presence of midshipmen from the Annapolis academy, who are on a training cruise.

Only a short time ago such a call on a German port by vessels of the United States might have been a rather painful event, and might have had a tendency to retard rather than hasten the healing of the wounds of war. But at Kiel the guests were received almost with open arms and were genuinely welcomed. The band on board the German flagship present played the "Star Spangled Banner" and the band of the Arkansas responded with the German national hymn. The admirals and local officials exchanged visits, salutes were fired, and the local newspapers indicated pleasure over the opportunity afforded to return the "generous hospitality extended regularly to German ships in American waters since 1925."

The meaning of the episode is clear and pleasing. The passions engendered by the World war are passing away as far as relationships between the United States and Germany are concerned. Indeed, to a large extent they have quite disappeared, the process of recession being furthered by the sportsmanlike effort of the Germans to rehabilitate themselves economically and politically without complaining or whining, and by the practical wisdom of her statesmen.

BISHOP CANNON TALKS

Bishop Cannon is again talking about the exclusion of unnaturalized aliens from the population count, insofar as that count is used in the reapportionment of congressional representation, and he broaches the subject, as he admits, because he thinks that if aliens were eliminated from consideration the "wet metropolitan centers" would lose about thirty congressmen and thirty electoral votes. Thus the dries would gain in the legislative councils of the nation and in the political field. Presumably the bishop stands for "principle." But the amount of principle behind this most recent contention of his attains no very imposing proportions if one conceives what, in view of the general nature of his utterance, would probably be his attitude with respect to alien representation in congressional reapportionment, if the metropolitan centers happened to be dry and the country places were relatively wet. Is righteousness compatible with unblushing opportunism in approaching points of principle? The bishop seems to think so.

It has been reported that Queen Mary of England smokes two cigarettes a day, one after luncheon and the other after tea. But we'll bet that no representative of a tobacco company will ever "high pressure" the royal lady into writing an indorsement of her favorite brand.

Among the things we don't care about knowing even now, is that the odds against any specific 13 cards appearing in one hand in a game of bridge are 635,013,559,600 to 1.

The University of Maine is said to have 8,000 more applicants for entrance this year than ever before. Is Rudy Vallee getting a commission for this?

NOW FOR WISDOM

The framers of the constitution believed that the best interests of the people would be served if unlimited freedom in speeches and debate were permitted in both branches of congress. It sounds fine as a theory. But as one writer points out, we have the freedom but not the wisdom. As it is now, members of the house and senate can speak with freedom and say as much as they choose. The constitution gave them that right. Now who will give them the common sense to know what to say—and how little?

A PUBLIC CAREER

A new college graduate says he had thought of going in for politics and a public career. He has become discouraged by what he has heard about politics and public life. Let's hope he will recover from his discouragement and go into it with all his might. Politics needs nothing so much in America as an influx of young men with ideals and courage. Kettering, able scientist, says manufacturing often suffers from too many men of experience. An experienced man thinks "it can't be done." An inexperienced man does not know it can't be done, and never ahead and does it. Politics suffers from men who have been doing things the wrong way for generations. They are over-experienced. We need young men who have not found out that things must be done in a certain way. Not knowing this, they will go ahead and do them in another way. And public life in America will be better for the change. Never advise a young man not to go into politics and public life. Public life needs new blood.

800 FEET UNDER WATER

Beebe, noted authority on the deep seas, descends 800 feet off the shores of Bermuda. Using a steel ball with fused quartz windows, he observes life down there. He hopes later to go down half a mile. Fortunately for the rest of us there are always some who have courage enough to find things out.

FOR ALL TIME

Cass Gilbert, famous New York architect, says the new supreme court building at Washington, soon to be erected, will be built to last all time. Of course Mr. Gilbert, excellent architect as he is, is mistaken. It will not last for all time. Nothing made by hands with material things will last so long. The thoughts, principles, minds of the men who will sit on the supreme bench will be more enduring than the building. Principles endure, mind endures, truth endures, life lasts forever.

HOT WEATHER

Hot weather is less a matter of the thermometer than of the mind. What we think about the weather and its effect on us is largely what we allow ourselves to think. Don't get upset by the heat. It's not worth it. The best way to treat the weather is to ignore it. Give it a chance and it will get you.

Radio Power

How much power does an eight-tube radio set consume?

The opinions of various radio experts is that such a set would consume between 90 and 100 watts and would cost about half a cent an hour to run. It would consume as much power as a 90-watt light.

America's Urban Trend

What is the trend of population from the country to the city or vice versa?

Infantile Paralysis

When is infantile paralysis most prevalent?

This dread disease is most prevalent during the summer and autumn, beginning about the first of June and continuing until the first of December. This period shows an increase of 1,000 per cent in the number of cases over the winter months.

End of the War

When was war with Germany officially declared at an end?

In July, 1921, congress declared "That the state of war declared to exist between the Imperial German government and the United States of America by joint resolution of congress, approved April 6, 1917, is hereby declared at an end."

Skywriting

What substances are used in skywriting?

The most modern skywriting apparatus uses crude oil, which is ejected onto a heated steel plate through a carburetor-like device. The vaporized oil makes a dense grayish cloud when it strikes the cold air. Crude oil has taken the place of other chemicals because it is simpler to use and makes a heavier cloud that is less likely to be destroyed by wind.

CHANGED TACTICS

NEW YORK CITY, New York. — Police Commissioner Mulrooney played a dirty trick on The Reds. Some days ago one of their number, idling in the sheltering shade of a Procter & Gamble Pulpit, was hit on the bean with a brick, tossed from an adjacent house-top by an anonymous capitalist.

The Worthy Brother after lingering a day or two on a hospital cot, lit out for the Evergreen Shore. His agitated and preternaturally indignant confidants staged a parade in his memory.

And the Police Commissioner ignored the proceedings. There wasn't a cop on the horizon. Instead of adhering to the Grover Whalen procedure, tossing a ukase at the Soviet Government, doubling the guard around his apartment house, placing his head on the shoulders of the city editors, filling their coat collars with damp soap and then charging the ranks of the marchers, in silk tile, spats and gardenia, Commissioner Mulrooney spat thoughtfully into the gutter and remarked to a reporter:

"If th' wind don't change, it's morn't likely we'll have a coolin' shower by nightfall."

It's that sort of thing that shakes one's faith in the beneficence of a democracy. If you can't coax a cop into combat by waving a discouraging red bandana handkerchief under his freckled snoot, what do the labors of Hamilton, Jefferson, Jackson, Trotsky, Lenin, Emma Goldman and Grover Whalen amount to?

A LION FOR SALE

When the population in the Central Park zoo reaches the crowding point, they hold an auction. They had one the other day and for nearly half an hour an auctioneer stood on an iron railing outside the home of the lions pleading with someone—anyone—in the crowd of 300 around him to bid in Beauty, the lioness, and her two daughters, Geraldine and Eleanor.

HOOVER'S ANTI-CRIME COMMISSION, WITH SCIENTIFIC PURPOSE IN MIND SEEN AS TOO 'HIGH CLASS' BY STEWART

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—The real trouble with President Hoover's anti-crime commission is peculiar. It is altogether too high class a commission for its job.

Its members are: Chairman, ex-Attorney General George W. Wickersham, one of the greatest lawyers in the world; Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in President Wilson's cabinet; Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, (Va.), and Monte M. Lemann, of New Orleans, deeply versed in corporation legal lore; Judges William I. Grubb, William S. Kenyon and Paul J. McCormick of the federal bench, and, of course, lawyers par excellence; Judge Kenneth Mackintosh of the Washington state supreme court; Frank J. Loesch, another distinguished lawyer and head of Chicago's crime commission; Dean Roscoe Pound of Harvard law school, and President Ada L. Comstock of Radcliffe college, a famous educator.

A regular galaxy of talent—and yet, what do those 11 know about crime?—with the exception, to be sure, of Frank Loesch—and even he can hardly be said to have solved the crime problem, if conditions in his home town of Chicago are to be accepted as any criterion.

"Great lawyers!—certainly," as Representative Tom D. McKeown, of Oklahoma said, discussing the commission just before congress adjourned, "but entirely inexperienced in criminal law."

It happens that I am on pretty good terms with some of the members of that commission. I believe I could get them to testify that I have taken more than the average newspaper man's sympathetic interest in the commission's work.

I know they would testify also that I have said from the first, to themselves, that their study of crime seems to me almost purely theoretical.

Again and again I have asked them what they are trying to do. The answer, in substance, always is the same:

"They consider that the commission is founding a science."

This complex explains what is complained of as the investigation's secrecy.

Its secrecy was referred to by Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, about the same time that Representative McKeown expressed himself. The senator insisted that public hearings were essential, if the inquiry ever is to be made anything of a success.

Naturally, publicity, and lots of it, market in New York. As Simeon Ford wrote to the circus people, the time a large solid Asiatic elephant broke loose and strayed into his backyard, lions are "de trop."

FASHIONABLE

With the stock market wobbling along on the thin red line that separates the pathetic from the ridiculous, Park Avenue, it is said, has adopted the slogan: "It's smart to be poor."

It may be true but I haven't observed it. Park Avenue seems to be weathering the storm. The Rolls Raspberry still purrs along that sacrosanct thoroughfare, as formerly; and I have yet to note a single Duchess from the Haunts of the Daughtry, snooping around the basement of the Five and Ten.

it, is the breath of life to such an investigation—if it is to be popularized.

But popularity is not the commission's object; its aim is scientific.

I have talked over the advantages of publicity, versus secrecy, with members of the commission, too.

They are not trying to keep anything dark.

They say simply that they have not progressed far enough yet to have any conclusions to make public.

To be strictly exact, they have given out what they call a partial report, but it was extracted from them under severe congressional pressure and much against the commission's will, because, as was unofficially explained, its researches thus far have been insufficient to justify even a partial report.

Chairman Wickersham has also made it to be a few suggestions, but tentatively; as he is not ready to say much.

There honestly is no use in try-

Peter's Adventures
By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

FLY CARRIES OUT HER THREAT

Off sped Ant, but this time Peter did not wait to watch the insect out of his sight as he had so often done. Instead, he began to wish and wish and to be his old self again. And no sooner had he whispered the magic words, "Watch, listen!" than he was boy size. With his head above the grass he got his bearings and made for the farmhouse door as fast as his legs would carry him. The first thing he saw as he sped into the yard was his mother coming out of the kitchen door with the roast beef on a platter.

"My trick didn't work," thought Peter. He was right. Fly carried out her threat, after all.

"Peter, just see what a fly has done!" cried his mother. "But how did the mean thing ever manage to lay her eggs on the roast that was never uncovered?"

"I know!" cried Peter and his mother looked at him in amazement. "Mrs. Fly sneaked into the pantry when your back was turned and dropped her eggs through the wire netting. Those eggs are so tiny they would slip through the mesh without a bit of trouble."

"So they would!" said Peter's mother, thoughtfully, then chuckled. "I guess that is exactly what happened," said she. "But how did you know? You could be no more sure if Mrs. Fly had told you."

"So she did mother!" cried Peter, following his mother indoors. But Mother was not listening. She had caught sight of Mrs. Fly skulking to hide behind a picture.

"Plague take that fly!" cried Mother. "If it is left in the house it may do more damage. Yet I have other things to do than chase it out of hiding. Take the fly-swatter, son, and see if you can't put a stop to her tricks, forever. I'm going to bake that pie for supper I must be about it!" Off bustled Mother.

Next: "Hide and Seek."

ing to get information out of the anticrime commissioners.

They have nothing to tell; maybe they never will have.

Their idea is that they are doing only the very preliminary spade work for a scientific edifice which others will have to go on building into the indefinite future; a task in fact, which never will be completed, any more than a research toiler ever can make a final report on all the possibilities of biology or chemistry.

Indeed, they speculate concerning the type of bureau to which they ultimately will have to turn over their task when they believe that they have given it a fair start.

It is from differences of opinion relative to the undertaking's purposes that so much argument arises.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who thought of it first, meant it to be a prohibition inquiry exclusively and wanted speedy action. Other lawmakers expanded it into a general crime inquiry, but even they looked for something definite in a matter of months at most.

The members of the commission itself visualize it as extending outward through a series of generations.

The vitality of a commission, once started, is wonderful.

Remedy for Underdeveloped Chin

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"IS THERE ANY cure or correction for a receding chin? My kid brother of 17, who has never had any serious illness, has developed this in the last five years. Do you think this could have been caused by his tonsils or adenoids (though he never complains of same and they have never been removed)? Please don't think I am 'sissy' for being interested in him. I will be very thankful for any suggestion or advice."

Indeed, I don't think you're a 'sissy' for being interested in your brother, W. You're the right kind of a brother to have. All too often the disabilities of a member of the family are fun and of and infirmities complexes and neuroses engendered that may mar the whole life of the unfortunate one.

If your brother's chin is so receding that it is a deformity, he can have it built up through bone grafting by a plastic surgeon. There is no other remedy. In Dr. H. Lyons Hunt's book on Plastic Surgery, there are "before" and "after" pictures of those who have this deformity, and you wouldn't know they were the same person. If your brother's chin is just mildly receding, he probably wouldn't want to go through this. In that case, he'll just have to live with it, or rise above it, as the saying is. There are some noted men and women who have much worse deformities than receding chin, who have become noted benefactors of mankind. For instance, one of the most famous educators of the world, Dr. Charles Eliot, had a large blood tumor on one side of his face, so that it pulled his upper lip down markedly on one side. (Such tumors are now cured in babyhood.) You'll notice in pictures of Dr. Eliot that he always had his profile view taken with his best side forward. But see what eminence he attained!

Curly's opinion of many receding chins and small chins are NOT a sign of weak will and weak mentality in general. The size or angle of the lower jaw has nothing to do with the intellect. Not a qu'illy underdeveloped chin are due to errors in feeding childhood, to finger and thumb sucking, to adenoids, and to teeth that haven't developed properly. Even the position of the baby while nursing or having its bottle is in part in the molding of the chin!

You don't mind, if I give a little advice to young mothers here, do you? The right physiologic position for a baby while getting its nourishment, is with chest upright and the neck extended so that the chin moves forward with each action of sucking. This helps to develop it, while if the baby takes its nourishment lying down, there is little backward displacement of the jaw in front, which may bring other bad results (choking, etc.) besides under-development of the chin.

Miss F. I couldn't find the typographical error you referred to the clipping you sent. You had word "Petersizing" underlined. I wonder if you thought that was misspelled? It was not. Some of the followers began to call receding chin "Petersizing," which changed it to "Petersizing"—which not only gives my name, but an indication of what's doing. Than you very much for your interest.

"Seventeen" The habit you speak of is discussed in our article on the subject. See column rule for obtaining it.

Understanding, Way to Happiness

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a girl of 17 and have been going with a boy one year my senior. He seems to care a lot for me, and he tells me he loves me, but sometimes he acts very queer as if he didn't care at all. When I ask him what is wrong he will always say: 'Honey, you're very funny to think there is anything wrong with me, for I care too much for you.' But I can tell when he acts this way."

"Do you think he cares anything for me?"

"BLUE EYES."

Do you know, Blue Eyes, more women have cried their eyes out because they thought a change in a fellow's mood meant that he didn't love them, than could count. No one feels the same all the time. One may feel very full of fun and very affectionate at one time when you are with them, and another they might feel quiet and unresponsive. Yet there could be no change in their love for their friends.

Do you now what the secret of a good friendship is? It is that a person can be with you in all moods and yet never doubt his love, but understand. Understand that it is not to many a young man's mind and marriage. You wonder why such a handsome man married such a homely woman or maybe the reverse. The answer is, it's these two people understand one another. They are sure of one another's love and affection at all times.

Try to understand this how when you say "love," it's not just a word, it's a feeling that you have in a rule—and that's the real meaning.

Heart-Broken Bobbie: If the boy friend is losing interest in you it would be better to make the suggestion yourself that you break up. You would never be happy married to a man who did not care for you and married you only because he didn't like to make the break.

But maybe he is just tired of your jealousy and if you stopped fussing and accusing him of flirting he would be happy in your companionship. It is almost impossible not to feel jealous occasionally, when you are in love, but you should make up your mind that showing it and worrying a person by scolding about it will just wreck your own happiness.

Forget it, and try to have a happy time, and if you have to break your engagement, be brave about it. You may never forget your love, but you needn't wreck your life on account of it.

Buttermilk Fine Drink, Says Expert

By GLADYS GLAD

AMONG THE majority of show-girls the legend persists that the consumption of buttermilk greatly beautifies the complexion.

There is a great deal of truth in that legend. Metchnikoff, European scientist, was the first authority to offer information that drinking buttermilk will prolong life. Naturally, if it extends the duration of our years, it improves our health. And if we are superlively healthy, the attractiveness of our complexions is greatly enhanced.

Buttermilk is one of the best of the summer drinks. That people are beginning to appreciate the value of this drink is evidenced by the number of "buttermilk stands" that have been erected throughout the country. Contrary to a prevalent superstition about it, buttermilk is not fattening. It is one of the best drinks that the obese individual can find. Although it is not essentially a reducer, it is listed in many reduction diets. As many as two quarts can be consumed daily without any injur to us after effects.

If you happen to be one of the thin, angular women, and you wish to add a few curves to your undeveloped figure, milk and not buttermilk, will hasten the process. For a summer drink, plain milk is a little heat-producing, and most of us, curved or no curves, would rather be cool than anything else. Nevertheless, I doubt if the drinking of a quart of milk a day would manufacture enough heat in the body to be really disturbing.

As for cooling drinks, the fruit juices are very healthful. The only danger in these drinks for our fat friends is that they may put too much sugar in their lemonade or orangeade. Grape juice also has its fattening qualities, due to the sugar in the grape. An occasional flaccid is one of the greatest "toners" that can be found.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Legs

Miss B.: I would suggest that you consult a physician about your legs. There may be some paralysis or knotted condition of the ligaments or muscles.

Lanolin

May: The skin under your eye is lacking in nourishment. Apply pure lanolin several times a week or, if you prefer, nightly, before retiring.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlet on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her care of this paper enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin for each to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

PINCH HITTING

for Phil Frame

BY R. A. H.

Phil Frame, the motorman of the sport page column known as "Sport Snap-Shots, Framed by Phil," is acting as motorman now for a Ford coupe which is bound for New York City where Frame, Art Hyman and "Skipper" Finlay will probably call on Mayor Jimmy Walker, Walter Winchell and other brightlights of Broadway.

In the meantime the column is left to run itself, like a boat without a pilot but with a substitute doing the pinch-hitting. If, during these days when Frame is away from home you should not like the tone of the column, save your criticism until he returns as he has run the column long enough to be accustomed to that sort of thing.

During the absence of Frame, pitcher for the Downtown Country Club team in the National League, and rated as one of the best pitchers in either league, the Downtowners get a "break" in their favor in the schedule.

Frame's team will not miss him this week because the Downtowners are not scheduled for a game, their next game being scheduled for Tuesday, July 22, with the Carroll-Binders. Frame will still be away next week. "Hank" Eley, if he is available, will probably do the pitching for the Downtowners in that contest. Frame will be back in time for the game the following week with the Lanes, on July 29. Two holidays, which threw the schedule off, are responsible for the fact that some teams have two games some weeks and none at all other weeks. The Krippendorff-Dittman Co. team, leader of the American league, is also idle this week.

The umpires of the softball commission or someone in authority has ruled against coaches "razzing" the pitchers in softball league games, and they might carry their authority a bit farther, and make a similar rule affecting the fans. To eliminate the "kidding" that fans enjoy would take a lot out of the game, of course, but even the fans they admit, perhaps, that perhaps they are a little harsh in putting some of the players on the "pan". No player has left the field for the stands to settle any personal argument so far, but if any of them was like "Hank" Wilson he would probably find plenty of excuses to do just that very thing.

The passing of "Long George" Kelly from the picture of major league baseball, is one of those unfortunate affairs that make the big league moguls look rather heartless.

Kelly was recently released by the Cincinnati Reds after being waived by all other major league managers. He came to the Reds in 1927 from New York in the trade that gave New York Eddie Roush, the Red fielder. Roush refused to sign this year, and is also out of baseball. Kelly's fielding has, and was at the time of his passing, on a par with that of any first baseman in either league. His stickwork has never been sensational but this year, in spite of frequent illness that caused him to lose time on the field, he was giving Cincinnati his best exhibition of hitting. Kelly was batting .387 when he left which is no mean figure, especially when compared with what the rest of the Reds are doing. Besides that his hits were no dribbles through the box, but mean smacks up against the fences.

President Wells issued a statement when Kelly was released, saying that his release was given him with the intention of building up a team of young ball players. This is inconsistent in view of the fact that Dan Howley began building his team this year by acquiring Harry Heilmann and Bob Meusel, who certainly cannot be classed as youngsters. It is also a fair team record that, while young ball teams are all right to talk about, it is the team made up of seasoned, experienced players that wins the pennant. Babe Ruth is no spring chicken.

Given the same latitude with players and money that Howley has been given, it would have been interesting to see what Jack Hendrix would have done with the Reds this year. Hendrix was handicapped because of a lack of money to spend, but usually kept his team higher in the race than this year's edition.

Howley came to the Reds with a reputation as a builder of teams. He used up a three-year contract with the St. Louis Browns getting that team from the cellar to the first division but wasn't able to produce a winner. Given three years with the Reds, it is admitted he will either "make" the team or wreck it. His trades of Luque for McWeeney, and Critz, Allen and Donohue for Benton and Crawford have certainly not showed much trading genius. McWeeney has already gone his way, Crawford has displayed little talent and Benton has been an indifferent pitcher. If Howley wants to build a young team he might start with Benton, of whom he thinks well enough to trade for, or with Eppa Rixey, the veteran of the staff, who pitched a sixth game against Philadelphia Saturday. A couple of more games like that and Howley will be shipping Rixey to Peoria for some young bench warmer.

KI-RO TIES SHOEMAKERS FOR LOOP LEAD DEFEATING MILITIA

The pitchers took a holiday at Cox Athletic Field Monday evening, and the batters did all the work, the Kiwanis-Rotary aggregation hammering out a 27 to 17 victory over the Company L National Guard team to tie the Krippendorff-Dittman Co. for leadership of the American League.

Russ Kimber, of the winners, was anything but effective on the mound, but he worried little as his mates found the offerings of Burnett more to their liking, and scored abundantly in every inning. The soldiers grabbed an impressive lead in the opening stanza by combining three hits and four errors for five runs while the civic club team was collecting but two.

"MONKEY-FACED" OWLS CAUGHT BY FARMER

TWO young "monkey-faced" owls, a variety rare in this section, are being exhibited by O. E. Humphrey, farmer, one-mile east of New Burlington, who captured them Saturday from a nest in a tree on the lawn of his home.

The birds are properly known as the Canadian hawk-owl and because of their rarity, Mr. Humphrey believes they may be of value to some zoo and expects to communicate with zoological organizations concerning them.

The fledglings make three from the nest captured by Mr. Humphrey, the first having fallen from the tree to the lawn two weeks ago. This bird, not yet feathered, was starting in its resemblance to a monkey, and was presented to the Forest Park Zoo at Dayton by Mr. Humphrey.

The parent birds have maintained a nest in a hole as large as a barrel in the hollow of a 175-year-old elm on the Humphrey lawn for two years and are blamed for a number of chicken losses suffered by the Humphreys. The nest was forty-five feet from the ground and was reached with difficulty by Mr. Humphrey, while the parent birds were absent. Unable to reach the young in the nest with his hand, Mr. Humphrey snared them with a twisted wire.

Although they have not learned to fly, the birds have a wing-spread of more than a yard now and are wild and vicious. Their feathers are white and buff and they repel advances by sitting back like a monkey and using their feet, wings and beak for weapons.

Their faces are not as flat as the common barn owl their beaks give them a hawk expression which probably earned them their name. And if you still believe that old hokum about an owl not being able to see in the daytime, try sticking your finger in front of one of Mr. Humphrey's strange pets.

Mr. Humphrey will keep the birds pending an effort to determine if they are wanted by a zoo.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 15.—The stock market continued to make further notable progress on the upside in today's session, as aggressive buying demand for a long list of bull favorites brought the current phase of the advance to new high levels since the upturn first set in from the lows of June 25th.

Professionals were more active on the bear side than in recent days, and constructive forces found considerable difficulty in attempting to consolidate the gains of the forenoon. However, leaders of the advance refused to be deterred and centered their attention on the carrier group, which bounded up sharply, particularly in the lower priced division. Among the speculative rallies to feature this upswing were Erie, Wabash, Western Maryland and Erie, while New York Central and Atchafalpa set the pace for dividend paying carriers.

In the industrial section, such speculative favorites as U. S. Steel, American Can, General Electric, Radio, Westinghouse and Vanadium, turned easier after forenoon strength and in the main ruled irregular within narrow trading limits.

"WHAT NAME, PLEASE?" ASKED "HELLO GIRL" OF EARLY DAYS

MISS ELIZABETH GOOD

Telephone operators of 1880 worked somewhat differently from those of today.

By GEORGE SMEDAL

Central Press Correspondent

ST. PAUL, July 15. — Just the other day here the oldest telephone operator in point of service in the United States took off her headset and put it away for the last time.

She is Miss Elizabeth Good, who began serving the St. Paul telephone public when there were no telephone numbers. She continued her service without interruption for fifty years.

The first telephone was installed in this city in 1879. A year later Miss Good joined the force of operators. In 1920, at a convention of the Telephone Pioneers of America, she was awarded the title of the oldest operator in point of service in the United States. Just to show that forty years of plugging in calls was not so much to her, she continued for another ten years before retiring.

Fourteen Subscribers
When telephone service was begun in St. Paul, there were only fourteen subscribers. There were only four operators, and each could handle only one call at a time, precluding more than eight persons from talking at one time.

"The first switchboard," Miss Good says in recalling her early work, "looked like the board used for quotations in a broker's office. A switchboard boy, running back and forth on a platform, made the connections. The operators were seated at sewing machine tables in which the sewing machine was replaced by the telephone instrument."

"Someone who wanted to call would turn a crank on his telephone. A bell rang in the office, and an indicator on the board dropped. The boy then connected the line with the operator. She got the call and told the boy, for instance:

"Connect Wampler with Wright."
"Wampler's was a drug store and Wright's was a livery stable. The boy made the connection. The operator then had to listen in periodically to see when the conversation was over. There was no disconnect signal."One Hundred Subscribers
Miss Good soon became chief operator. When the telephone system had been installed for a year, the company boasted of 100 subscribers. The operating mechanism had been simplified somewhat, even at that early date.

It was in 1884 that Miss Good initiated among her operators the system of required courtesy to phone users that has become an integral part of a present-day operator's training. It worked well enough when she was in the room, but when she was out the girls were likely to enter into a flippancy conversation with someone. So she got an assistant, and later an assistant chief operator.

For many years Miss Good continued her service as chief operator. Recently she has been in charge of pay stations in the central office and also has served as an assistant in the commercial office at times.

When asked if she were going to remain idle, Miss Good replied: "I should say not! I'll be looking around for something in a little while."

It's Your A&P Store

As the town you live in is yours

Housewives, visiting a young merchant's store in 1859, found goods on his shelves they liked—and—as housewives do—told others.

Thus, A & P's business grew from this single store. First one customer brought another. Then one neighborhood brought another.

A & P has not forgotten why it outgrew a single store. It knows it must make good in each community if its stores are to be accepted by many.

Because A & P realizes this, the A & P store nearest you is run by your townsmen. Men in your own locality keep your store in touch with the A & P system. The food on its shelves is there because you have asked for it.

A & P is made up of many such stores, just as the United States is made up of many communities like your own. Your A & P store serves you better because it is part of a large system, just as your community suits you better because it is part of a great nation.

DR. CLENDENING, FAMED WRITER, TO CONDUCT COLUMN

the leading practitioner of Kansas City, have placed him in an outstanding position to write, particularly on the human body, on which he is recognized as an authority. Publication of his book caused widespread discussion in literary and medical circles.

Mencken Commends Book. H. L. Mencken, editor of the American Mercury and the nation's critic of critics, has declared "The Human Body" is "sound in facts, admirable in its clarity, charmingly written and by long odds the best work that has yet come to light in America."

Other critics have compared Dr. Clendening's book to Durant's "Story of Philosophy" and Wells' "Outline of History."

Dr. Clendening is a native Kansas Cityan born on May 25, 1881. He was educated in the public schools and later spent two years at the University of Michigan, after which he went to the University of Kansas medical school, receiving his M. D. degree in 1907.

His profession has paid him high honors. He is a member of the board of governors of the American College of Physicians and a fellow in the American Therapeutic Association and the American Medical Association, and the American Association of Medical and Climatological Association.

When it was announced that Dr. Clendening had decided to put his work into health articles, to be written in a vein that would attract the average reader, physicians here declared they would be a boon to public welfare.

Dr. Jabez N. Jackson, nationally known physician and surgeon, former president of the American Medical Association, voices his approval of Dr. Clendening's intention to write health articles.

"Beneficial to Public" "I have read some of Dr. Clendening's works," he says. "They are very clever—good—fine. They should be beneficial to the public."

Dr. D. M. Nigro, assistant health director and commissioner of child hygiene and communicable diseases, believes:

"Dr. Clendening's health articles will be of especial benefit to this branch of the city government. The understandable manner in which he writes his material makes it intensely interesting. The public's benefit to be derived from his work should aid materially in cutting down contagious diseases and also be of inestimable value to expectant, as well as young, mothers with little experience in the care of infants. After all, prevention of disease is the big item in the building of a city's health, and I believe Dr. Clendening has the literary power to build up a following that will be of great benefit to the nation's health system."

"Doing a Great Deed" Dr. Eugene Carbaugh, pioneer physician, and specialist in industrial surgery, heartily endorses Dr. Clendening's work.

"It is a great public service for Dr. Clendening to devote his spare time from the sick room, the operating room and the laboratory to writing health articles for the public," says Dr. Carbaugh. "He is doing a great deed and his reward will be an improved health condition throughout the land if the layman will follow his writing closely."

Dr. S. D. Henry, health director of Kansas City, Kas., also declares the public will benefit through Dr. Clendening's articles.

"Dr. Clendening's style of writing is a gift few physicians possess. The layman can read his articles and rest assured that they are authoritative and based upon common knowledge and scientific investigation."

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

CHAPTER 50

Life for Clara Dee, resumed its old routine, except that she was left alone two or three nights each week, while Earnest Blake entertained Madge. It seemed rather inconsistent, thought Clara Dee, that Madge's happiness had been bought at the price of her own; for had Winfield never deserted her, she would probably never have gone to St. Louis and Madge would not have met Earnest. An inevitable law of compensation, wherein it was not the loser who benefited. They often insisted that Clara Dee join them, but she always declared that "three was a crowd" and she really enjoyed the long summer evenings alone.

She had learned the precious contentment of solitude: "Nunquam minus solus quam cum solus." Plainly, Madge was all wrapped up in her new friend, and Earnest was apparently devoted to the girl. A new radiance enhanced her plain features, and Clara Dee prayed that her devotion would not cost her too much sorrow. If only all love, pledged and given birth, could but continue on and on, up the straight, shining road of life. But there were so many curves ahead, around which not even the wisest could see, detours, rough places and so often, an abrupt ending.

Two weeks later, she went to a birthday party—a surprise for one of the girls in the office. She hadn't cared particularly about going, but everyone insisted that all the others would be there. Besides, she decided that she must go out and stop brooding over what was past forever. She must force herself to forget Winfield and all of her life which she associated with him. It was best.

Earnest was out of town, so she went to the party with Madge. Of course, she was at once popular. Her beauty and patrician bearing very naturally stood out among them. She tried to enter into the merry-making with genuine enthusiasm, but found it difficult. She discovered also, to her disgust, that there were no chaperons.

Someone had cleverly arranged that the girl's parents were absent, which seemed to be what they usually did when a party was planned. She could not see that there was much of a party about it, they rolled back the rugs and danced to the harsh jazz of a play-er piano and a very "squawky" radio. Couples drifted off upstairs into shadowy corners at various intervals, or sat in the parked cars outside, and so many of the fellows insisted upon dancing with her that she became conspicuous and resentful.

The party had not been restricted to those of the office force, as she had expected it to be; it seemed that all of their friends had also been invited, or had come without an invitation. Most of them were the kind, who, if ever they should discover Clara Dee's identity, would forever boast that they had rubbed elbows with the "four hundred."

She danced with several of the fellows until she was exhausted. It was very warm and they held her so closely that she soon decided not to try to be a "good sport"; for she could not follow their pace. "Aw, just one more," insisted a slender, sleek-haired youth, as he endeavored to pull her into the middle of the floor. "Gee, but you're a swell little dancer. You must have been with the 'Follies' with your looks and all."

Clara Dee shook her head. "No, thank you, I don't think I'd dance any more," she evaded.

"Then let's take a spin in my little 'ol bus. We don't need to come back here unless you want," his hand tightening persuasively on her arm.

She reflected that she would probably need a pair of roller skates or a "spare" pair of shoes to get back home if she went with him, but murmured politely again, "No, thank you, I came to a party, not to go riding."

While she sat with burning cheeks, trying to occupy her time with coaxing more harmony from the home-made, two-tube set, she overheard one girl inquire of another, "Having a good time?"

Then the reply, "K. O. The new Jane's a queen, though, ain't she, or thinks she is. We'd be about as popular as squaws if she stuck around long. We ain't got a chance against her!"

"Who is she, anyway? Where's she from?"

"She's the old man's secretary at the National Chem. Sent from New York."

"Gosh! no wonder she's got such grand airs! Some people get all the breaks in this world—looks, chances and everything!"

"I'll say they do," agreed the other, as they drifted away.

Having overheard this conversation, Clara Dee went out to the kitchen and insisted upon helping the hostesses prepare the lunch. She'd give the rest a chance, she thought, smiling with amusement. By the time supper was served and the punch had been "doctored" with most of the contents of the boys' flasks, the hilarity was beyond anyone's control. Some of them could not have told if they were eating birthday cake or swi-bach, but they were consuming great quantities of food.

Clara Dee assisted with the serving, responding with as much alacrity as she could muster to their rude sallies. "Here, you, baby, I'll have another sandwich." "Yes, sir, that's my baby!"

She and Madge taxied home early, unescorted, and she concluded that not all the hilarious celebrations and immoral indulgence were confined to the idle rich, as seemed to be generally supposed. And the same pleasures, stripped of the sumptuous glamour of luxurious settings, deferential manners and well-bred speech, made the effect even more tawdry. In spite of Ivan's code of life, and that of the people with whom he associated, there had been no such vulgar displays at their gay gatherings.

One day, she was informed by Mr. Randall, that, having been with the company less than six months, she was entitled to only one week of vacation.

"Thank you, Mr. Randall. I hadn't expected even that. When do you prefer that I should have the week?"

"I'm sorry I can't give you your choice. The others were decided upon earlier in the spring. Would

WILL EXPLAIN NEW PENSION BILL HERE ON THURSDAY NIGHT

The new veterans pension bill will be explained to Greene County ex-service men by Paul Fuller, service officer of Foody Post, American Legion, at a meeting at post hall in the Court House Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

All veterans interested in the new law, whether they are Legion members or not, and all veterans now drawing compensation for disability, are invited to attend the meeting. It is pointed out that disability need not to have occurred in service to qualify for a pension under the new law, as the disability may have occurred any time since then.

Changes in the veterans' act by the addition of new clauses which will raise the compensation of disabled veterans will also be explained at the meeting. Mr. Fuller is urging veterans to attend because the compensation starts from the day of filing the application.

Mr. Fuller spent two days last week at the office of the Veterans Bureau in Cincinnati investigating case records of local claimants, which are now available for investigation, although they were formerly kept in secret. The new pension law provides a pension of $24 a month for total disability; $24 for 75 per cent disability; $18 a month for 50 per cent disability and $12 a month for 25 per cent disability.

Palestine Portia

Miss Freda Slutzkin, above, of Jerusalem, is the first woman entitled to practice law in the courts of Palestine. She emigrated from Australia to Palestine six years ago.

you accept the last week of July?"

"Any time that is most convenient for you suits me." She was delighted when she found that Madge had the last two weeks of July and was going to spend her vacation on her uncle's farm in Iowa. "And you are coming with me," she declared enthusiastically. "I know you will be welcome and will love the family. There are three children and we have the loveliest times. Ever visit in the country?"

"Not on a real farm," Clara Dee replied. Country estates, mountain resorts and beach colonies were nothing like real Iowa farms, she was sure.

So Madge wrote to her uncle, received an immediately reply with an urgent invitation to Clara Dee, their vacations were arranged.

"I wish you were going to have two weeks," said Madge. "I shall be all tanned and freckled by the time you get there. I like to go there because I don't have to buy a lot of new clothes, that is, besides enjoying it immensely, too. A bathing suit, a pair of knickers, some gingham frocks and one for church and parties—there is always a party. Ever go to a real country party?"

Clara Dee replied that she never had.

"They're great fun." "I hope more fun than the one we attended last week."

"Yes, wasn't that silly? Aunt Jennie would be horrified at such 'capers' as she would call them. Out in the country, they play singing games on the lawns, serve lunch under the trees. Everyone has a jolly time. There are always a few who would like to spoil the fun, but they are in the minority and have to behave. And I'll introduce you to Don Evans, too. Madge promised, as if she were bestowing a special favor.

Came the second week of July, days of scorching heat and blinding sun; the only relief to the sweltering city was a faint, hot breeze every night. Clara Dee dragged her damp, aching body to the office each morning, unrefreshed by a night of tossing upon the hot sheets. She could eat nothing, grew thinner waiting for cooler weather and a restoration of her appetite.

She had never suffered such discomfort, having always been sheltered from severe extremes of temperature.

Madge left for her vacation on the fifteenth. "How I dislike to leave you here alone, old dear. I shan't unless you promise to eat more and take better care of yourself."

"You're not dreading to leave me one half as much as leaving Earnest," Clara Dee taunted her. Madge flushed scarlet and bent lower over the sewing in her hand. "Oh, I think it will be rather a good thing for him to miss me! Of course, I shall miss him, but going to Uncle Tom's is like going home for me, and a dozen Earnests couldn't keep me here."

give him every aid at their command.

Relays of men were forced to take turns in carrying the youth laboriously down the mountainside in a stretcher which had been fashioned from the silken folds of the parachute. Goldsborough had lapsed into unconsciousness.

At the end of a mile, the trail became so steep the young aviator was taken from the stretcher and placed in the arms of the men.

Mrs. Gertrude Goldsborough, mother of the boy, arrived in Bennington this morning. She walked the streets for hours while the little procession moved slowly down the mountainside with her son. She cried out her desire to go to him at once, but friends dissuaded her. She would be waiting at the hospital when her boy arrived, she said. She is near collapse and under the care of a physician.

The men who found Goldsborough must have passed within rods of him and passed around him several times during the night-long intensive search. But it was not until dawn broke that a Bennington man, Fred Allen, first sighted the wreckage in which the youth was found. With Allen were Albert Montague and Leonard Lawrence, also of Bennington.

Goldsborough is the son of the late Brice Goldsborough, aviator,

The Theater

This column referred the other day to the decline of musical talkies, a statement to which Sigmund Romberg, composer of "The Desert Song," "New Moon" and other famous American operettas takes exception.

Hallam Cooley recalls that in the old days actors were more or less a drug on the market. He illustrated with the story of his first picture engagement. It was in a serial at the Selig Zoo and Hallam was required to enter the cage of a lion.

The lion immediately objected. Looking around for protection, Hallam was dismayed to see no firearms in the hands of the attendants outside the cage.

"Hey," he shouted, "where are your guns?"

"What do you mean guns?" responded the boss attendant. "That lion cost a lot of dough and we ain't going to have him killed."

Did you know that Lupe Velez got her first real break in pictures after Doug Fairbanks saw her in a musical show in Hollywood? She had failed twice before to get screen work.

Star Gazing

By RADIE HARRIS

By Central Press

Real name is Marguerite. Ab-breviating it for professional purposes was her first and only becoming.

Born in Salt Lake City, Nov. 25 of Swedish parentage. Has never met Brigham Young or Greta Garbo.

Her childhood ambition was to run an orphan's home. Still is. During a visit to the World's Fair in San Francisco visited the menagerie and was bawled out by a man for feeding grass to giraffe. After the scolding, the man asked her how she would like to go into pictures and presented her with his card. His name was Colonel Selig. She thought he was a white slave driver but took the card anyway.

19 Pictures in Year. Three years later presented it at the studio. Proved the promised "open sesame." Was given extra work at $3 a day. Looked naughty, so was given vamp roles to play. Made 19 pictures in one year. Has never had a vacation "by request" since.

Loves cloudy, snowy, rainy weather. And lives in a land of perpetual sunshine.

Can't sleep in a room that is light. Only swims in enclosed tank. Only plays tennis after dark. Only rides horseback in evening. Has reckless, anyway.

Is sentimental for a few months at a time. Then spends the next few months burning all her treasured letters, photographs and clippings.

Would rather eat a slice of bread and butter at the Ritz than a seven course dinner at a cheap table d'hôte restaurant.

Always wears black or white for evening attire but likes vivid colors for daytime.

Is only superstitious about telling things before they actually happen. Never talks about a part until she has it.

Hopes to be able to play the role of "Josephine" some day. And to make her debut on Broadway.

OHIO POEMS BEING RETURNED; WINNER OF CONTEST KNOWN

Thousands of poems submitted in the Ohio song contest, sponsored in the state department of education to discover a suitable state song, are being returned to their authors by Miss Edith Keller, state supervisor of music, after a committee of judges had picked the prize-winning poem.

The judging committee was composed of Mrs. Clarence Worum, Columbus; Mrs. B. Y. Williams, Cincinnati; and Hugh Fullerton of The Columbus Dispatch. The majority of the poems submitted were good, but many did not lend themselves to musical accompaniment, judges said. Poems were sent in by contributors from all parts of the United States.

Miss Keller now is planning to secure a proper musical composition for the lyric given the highest ranking by the judges. As soon as the accompaniment is obtained the name of the author and composer of the music will be announced.

"The Home Of Thrift"

Growing dollars—dollars actually growing in purchasing power—are the result of present falling markets and falling prices of commodities or necessities.

Many can well remember how, after the Civil War, prices gradually fell until the dollar saved prior to 1872 would buy twice as much as it would when saved. This condition continued until 1896.

Do you appreciate the fact that the dollars you have saved and that you are now saving or withholding from unnecessaries, are growing in value rapidly—and that they may presently buy for you very much more than they will buy now?

Our 6% Compound Interest offers further encouragement. If you can redeposit your dividends, as many are doing, the buying power of these same dividends may presently be greatly increased. First mortgages and an ample Safety Fund will give you complete safety in the meanwhile.
